office to sit around and do nothing? I know you wouldn't. We're going to have to address it at the local level. If we start doing it at a local level, the feds will take notice, and they'll help us. There are nearly 12 million people in this country illegally and a lot of them are in this county. They're costing us money. The very people that built [the county's] new jail and support the current sheriff are the people who want to keep the illegals in this county - they're developers, they're contractors, they're real estate people. They want to build this county into another Fairfax county. There's nothing wrong with growth. You've just got to be responsible. So, while you've got illegals in the county jail tonight sleeping in a brand new jail, we've got kids in trailers in our county schools.

Proffitt: In 2003 [when immigration became a hot issue], we'd already worked out an agreement with the federal government to be reimbursed for every illegal immigrant we house. We now have a current program where we work with ICE [Immigration and Customs Enforcement] where everyday they get a copy of our daily population of inmates, so they can compare it with who is wanted. As Chief Thierry Dupuis with the police department said, "We can't arrest ourselves out of this problem." We have to work on it step-by-step. Congressman [Eric] Cantor wants to work on a program where the first deportations are the ones who commit crimes, so that's where we have to start. We've been very active on this, and on average with ICE, we're looking at deporting about 10 a month at the Chesterfield County jail.

Would you make changes in the way promotions are awarded?

Hall: In my eight years with the sheriff's office, minorities have been very absent in the higher administration - lieutenants and up. Basically, it's just a bunch of old white men running the sheriff's office. That's not acceptable in a county that's as diverse as Chesterfield. I don't agree with it. Women have really suffered under the past regime of Clarence Williams. I want to make changes.

Hall: My main concern is illegal immigration. I'm going to enter into an agreement with ICE. They've had this program available since 1996 called 287(g). What you do is you enter into a memorandum agreement with ICE to act as their agents. We'd take our deputies that work in the jails processing inmates, [and] they would be trained. It's a four-week program, federally funded, no additional cost to the taxpayers. We would then be able to detain [illegal immigrants]. Under this program, if they get 60 days on a DUI, they don't leave on the 61st day. They stay there, and they get deported. Like the chief of police said, we can't arrest our way out of it, but we've got to start somewhere, and this is the place to start.

Describe your actual experience with a budget. What's the largest budget you've ever worked with?

Hall: I don't have a lot of experience in that area. My experience goes back to working for my father in his business back in the 1970s, 80s. However, I don't necessarily have to have the actual experience of crunching numbers. Sheriff Proffitt has an individual who takes care of that for him. Bringing in someone who's well-educated and experienced to do such a task is what it's all about. I'm sure governors don't know everything about budgets and neither do presidents. The main thing is to surround yourself with some successful, well-educated people who have that experience.

Proffitt: My budget experience goes all the way back to when I was a captain with the police department. And although I do have [an employee] who takes care of my budget for me, and he's very well-trained, I am responsible for that budget. When it comes down to the bottom line of what's cut, what we spend [money on], that decision is up to me.

DeMay: My experience is working with Virginia State Parks, and we never have enough money, and that's always a challenge for us. In an actual dollar amount, about $50,000 per project is what I've been personally responsible for.
